Bio Ken Richards is a talented and seasoned executive with over 30 years of experience in business (with over half of that in C-level positions) in industry, consumer goods, advertising and marketing, education, and consulting. He brings a wealth of expertise and strength in areas such as financial forecasting, strategic development and branding, marketing and advertising, sales, effective staffing, production efficiencies, human resources and legal. Ken graduated with honors from Ohio University, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, won early admission to graduate school, and graduated with Bachelor's and Master's degrees.

With an abundance of experience in multiple industries, Ken began his career in advertising at Wells, Rich & Greene, a top tier advertising agency on Madison Avenue in New York City. After 12 years in advertising in the United States' 3 largest international agencies (Wells, Rich, Greene, Inc., Ted Bates/NY, and D'Arcy, McManus and Macius, Inc.) where he worked for Fortune 50 companies like Procter & Gamble, Warner-Lambert, M&M Mars, CitiBank, and the New York State Department of Tourism ("I Love New York"), Ken moved to the client side as Director of Corporate Communications for Webcraft, Inc., the largest direct mail design and database management company in the U.S. He later became Corporate Vice President for Marketing at Chas. P. Young, one of the most successful financial printers on Wall Street. From there, he and a partner founded Swain, Richards & Associates, a boutique marketing firm specializing in companies with products in the areas of publishing, high-end technology, medical technology, banking, medical product development, retail, and fashion. Clients included CitiBank, Time-Warner, Discover Channel, Pierre Fabré, and Webcraft, among others.

For a significant part of his career, Ken specialized in education. He was a part of the team that built the Ross School in East Hampton, NY, a private K-12 laboratory school researching with Harvard University the education of a student population for a global economy. Later, he focused on turning around colleges with serious accreditation, financial or student success issues. In that role, working with private equity firms, Ken successfully turned around 4 colleges while winning national accreditation awards. He served as a consultant to Ohio Senate Minority Leader Eric Kearney in the area of post-secondary education. In 2012, he formed KHRC, LLC, providing consulting services to CEO's of start-up to mid-size corporations. Recently, he added Equis Financial as a resource to his clients.

Since graduating from WHS, Ken has lived primarily in New York City, East Hampton, NY, Fort Lauderdale, FL, and Cincinnati, OH. He and his partner raised 2 children, who live in New York and New Jersey. Ken now resides about 30 minutes outside of Boston. He continues to perform as a professional musician, is an avid weight lifting/cardio enthusiast, and serves on a number of corporate and non-profit Boards of Directors.
